We encourage all advertisers to start SKAN testing as soon as possible

SKAN reporting
(toggle ON)

% holdout

Cell 2

iOS14 campaign
w/o SKAN reporting
(toggle OFF)

% holdout

Hypothesis: SKAN reporting will result in lower reported conversions.

Lift, however, should remain ~the same as optimization models have not been impacted

- Campaign: 1 BAU campaign per cell (no AAA)
- Optimization: MAI/AEO (pick one, same across both campaigns)
- Targeting: same across both campaigns
- Budget: MSP calculated, same across both campaigns
- Creatives: same across both campaigns
- Placement: automatic placement
- Flight time: 14 days
- Key metrics: Lift metrics vs differences in reported ROAS, CPI, CPP, Purchases, Installs from Ads Manager

Why should we be testing SKAN?

1

Technical readiness

- Understand the new SKAN campaign set up flow and reporting set up
- Ensuring configuration of conversion schema work as expected

Impact of new SKAN attribution

- Understand the differences in conversions and results between the new SKAN attribution, existing Ads Manager reporting and lift
- Important for future references when SKAN becomes the default reporting option
